

Student A:

Sneakers go _____ a long way. In the late 18th century, people wore _____ bottomed shoes called plimsolls, but they were _____ crude—for one thing, there was no right foot or left foot. Around 1892, the U.S. Rubber Company came up with more _____ rubber sneakers with canvas tops, called Keds. By 1917, these sneakers began to be mass _____. (They got the nickname sneakers because they were so quiet, a person wearing them could sneak up on someone.)

That _____ year, Marquis Converse produced the _____ shoe made just for basketball, called Converse All-Stars. In 1923, an Indiana hoops star named Chuck Taylor _____ the shoes, and they became known as _____ Taylor All-Stars. These are the best-selling _____ shoes of all time.

Student B:

Sneakers go _____ a long way. In the late 18th _____, people wore _____ bottomed shoes called plimsolls, but they were pretty crude—for one thing, there was no right foot or left foot. Around 1892, the U.S. Rubber Company came up with more comfortable _____ sneakers with canvas tops, called Keds. By 1917, these sneakers began to be _____ produced. (They got the _____ sneakers _____ they were so quiet, a person wearing them could sneak up on someone.)

_____ same year, Marquis Converse produced the _____ shoe made just for basketball, called Converse All-Stars. In 1923, an Indiana hoops star named Chuck Taylor endorsed the shoes, and they became known as Chuck Taylor All-Stars. These are the best-selling _____ shoes of all time.

Student C:

Sneakers go _____ a long way. In the late 18th _____, people wore rubber bottomed shoes called plimsolls, but they were pretty _____—for one thing, there was no _____ foot or left foot. Around 1892, the U.S. Rubber Company came up with more comfortable rubber sneakers with _____ tops, called Keds. By 1917, these sneakers began to be mass produced. (They got the nickname sneakers _____ they were so _____, a person wearing them could sneak up on someone.)

That same year, Marquis Converse produced the first shoe made just for basketball, called Converse All-Stars. In 1923, an _____ hoops star named Chuck Taylor _____ the shoes, and they became known as Chuck Taylor All-Stars. _____ are the best-selling basketball shoes of all _____.

Student D:

_____ go back a long way. In the late 18th _____, people wore _____ bottomed shoes called plimsolls, but they were pretty _____—for one thing, there was no right foot or _____ foot. Around 1892, the U.S. Rubber Company came up with more comfortable rubber sneakers with canvas tops, called Keds. By 1917, these sneakers began to be _____ produced. (They got the nickname sneakers because they were so quiet, a person wearing them could sneak up on _____.)

That same year, Marquis Converse produced the first shoe made just for basketball, _____ Converse All-Stars. In 1923, an Indiana hoops star named Chuck Taylor endorsed the shoes, and _____ known as Chuck Taylor All-Stars. These _____ the best-selling basketball shoes of all time.

